Message:

To my elected officials:

I am a resident of the city of Dallas in Dallas county.

We need fair representation and fair maps. This redistricting process is essential to providing good governance for Texans in the coming 10 years. I ask that you carefully consider the all of the criteria and redraw the maps to make districts fairer, and in line with established principles from legal precedent and the National Council of State Legislatures.

I also ask you to establish a non-partisan redistricting commission so that Texans of all political parties can rely on fair representation from the redistricting process. Several other states have led the way towards non-partisan commissions. Texas should follow their lead and find a way to make sure that our democratic system of government thrives. Texas deserves fair maps and a strong representative form of democracy, not some gerrymandered districts that disadvantage all of us.

I could give you all the obvious facts like how confusing and unfair this is to the residents of the districts. How inefficient your lines are; separating school districts from the families they serve. How transparent this arranging of the areas is to favor white conservative voters so the GOP will surely win. I could repeat these and many other logical points, but the real question is how do you look at yourselves in the mirror and sleep at night????

Please reconsider,

V. Civello
